The Noshing Hour

Posted on August 6th, 2009 by Erin Callier

Whether you just got out of the theater, need to fill your belly with more than liquid fuel or simply keep rockstar hours, there are many reasons to seek out a bite to eat in the wee hours, but unfortunately, not so many non-fast food places to satisfy your nocturnal hunger. However, two new standouts are serving top-shelf cocktails alongside exquisite late-night fare.

Located in the Loop, the new Eclipse Restaurant features a late-night menu that many a folk prone to puns have called "out-of-this-world." Nestled in the lunar-themed Moonrise Hotel, Eclipse serves their hand-cut truffle fries, applewood beef sliders and other post-party friendly fare until 2 a.m. each night of the week. The roof-top bar is not to be missed.

Open until 12:30 a.m., Tuesday through Saturday, brand new, bite-sized Niche Taste Bar serves a tastebud-blowing menu that changes nightly. Founded upon the principal of using fresh, local ingredients, Taste and its Mama Bear, Niche, are well-deserved culinary critic darlings. Check out Taste's Tweets to see what gastronomic magic they're serving up tonight.
